

ARE YOU READY TO BE A CLIMATE CHAMPION AT WORK?

Just because you aren't on a sustainability team doesn't mean you don't play a crucial role in driving climate impact at your company. In fact, your company can't take ambitious climate action without you! In the face of overwhelmed sustainability teams and the acknowledgement that the private sector needs to do much more on climate, it's clear we need many more hands on deck – and that's where you come in.

The Climate @ Work Employee Training is the culmination of Project Drawdown's successful efforts to make every job a climate job. Our Climate Solutions at Work Guide and Job Function Action Guides have been read and implemented by thousands of employees across industries, from manufacturing to sports to food services. We've supported employees across functions in making climate a cornerstone of their company and sharing their success stories. The employee training packages our work to date into a workshop for non-sustainability employees looking to turn climate concern into climate action.

WHAT YOU'LL GAIN:

Over the course of three weekly 90-minute sessions, the Climate @ Work Employee Training will guide you through examples, discussions, and activities to help you understand the role of businesses in scaling climate action and why non-sustainability employees like you are key drivers. You will brainstorm a list of actions and develop a plan for one of them, connect with other climate-activated employees in similar roles to yours, and walk away with more resources and confidence!

After this training, you will be prepared to help your sustainability team and company implement ambitious climate solutions, align your climate concerns and values with your day job, and take climate action at your workplace with a practical plan to help you get started.

THE IDEAL PARTICIPANT:

The training will focus on supporting employees in coming up with their own ideas for how to take climate action within their roles and workplace. The training does not cover the science of climate change or individual solutions. You are likely a good fit for this training if:

- You have a general understanding of the “what” of climate change – the overall causes, consequences, and solutions.
- You are not on your company's sustainability team, but are interested in climate action. You might've already taken the initiative to show your interest in climate at work, such as by joining your employee-led green team.
- You are ready to dedicate time to planning climate action you can take in your role and workplace.
- You are willing to be an engaged participant and connect with others.

While this training is free and open to the public, we ask that all interested employees apply via this form to ensure participants are a good fit.
